The Canadian Province of Alberta is joining the Ports-to-Plains Alliance, offering its leadership as the northern anchor of the rural economic development partnership. It's the first Canadian member to join the nine-state coalition, to promote rural development in North America's energy and agricultural heartland. The Ports-to-Plains Alliance, is a grassroots rural development coalition based in Lubbock, and includes San Angelo, and going south to Mexico. The ports to plains alliance also recently joined the online community with a facebook page and twitter.
